The Museum's collections grew over tenfold in 2005, when Oregon State University transferred legal ownership of its Horner Collection to BCHS. The Horner Collection includes artifacts, art and documents relating to the early history of the region, OSU and its predecessor, Oregon Agricultural College. This collection is the third largest and among the most diverse in Oregon. BCHS, taking its stewardship responsibilities seriously, custom-built a $2.2 million state-of-the-art collections center on its Philomath campus to house and care for the expanded collection.
